

A Real Woodsman

Margie fell forward as her foot slipped into a hole near a dead tree. She pulled her foot out of the hole and stood up.	12 25
Her father was clearing a path through the thick bushes that grew along the river. She hurried to catch up with him.	35 47
Tree branches hit against Margie's face, and her clothes caught on a bush, but she didn't stop.	56 64
"A good woodsman doesn't fall behind," she said to herself. "If I don't show Dad that I know how to act in the forest, he won't take me along again."	73 87 94
Margie's father worked for the Alaska Fish and Game Office. But he almost never saw the inside of an office. Instead, he flew an airplane over the rivers where the salmon came to lay their eggs. Part of his job was to count the salmon.	103 114 125 138 139
