

Trapped

Kiya the sea gull spotted a bundle of seaweed tangled in a length of wire. It had been washed ashore and promised a picnic of delicious food.	13 26 27
Kiya circled over the bundle, and when he found it quite safe, he fell to work. He pecked at the weeds with his bill. The more he pecked, the more he found.	40 55 59
The wire got in his way. He had to untangle the straw and the seaweed before he could reach the crabs that hid within. He pushed at the wire until one end came free. Then Kiya stuck his head into the opening.	73 86 100 101
Other gulls noticed the flapping of Kiya's wings and came down to join him. Screaming and flapping their wings, the gulls pecked at the seaweed and pulled at the wire. They ate what they could find and then flew away. At that moment Kiya discovered that he was tangled.	112 125 139 150
