Caden Thomas: Future Carpenter

Caden Thomas, a graduate of Murray High School, focused on the CTE Carpentry Pathway. He would like to start his own construction business someday. Caden developed skills to advance his goals while taking carpentry and construction classes where he further developed his skills as a craftsman. Caden received a CTE Scholarship and Tuition Award to Salt Lake Community College to continue his studies in carpentry.

“My goal after graduating from high school is to go to Salt Lake Community College and get a two-year AS degree in construction management. While going to school, I would like to be able to work for a big name construction company to further my education and gain experience in the workforce.

“In the carpentry/construction class we were able to build hands-on skills that we will be able to use for the rest of our lives. The class is very motivating. Seeing what you can accomplish in just a few hours makes you want to come back the next day to continue the project. You are taught the proper way to complete a job, even though it may not be easy. It teaches you to have patience and take pride in the work you do at the project house and in the woodshop. Once I have gained a sufficient amount of experience I would like to be able to be my own boss and start my own business,” said Caden.
