

A Charging Bull

Red could hear the sound of breaking branches as the big bull	12 pushed through the undergrowth. Then came a deep roar and the	23 thunder of hoofs. The bull began to charge.	31
Red grabbed Anne his sister by the shoulder and pulled her across	43
the ground. With all his might, he pushed her under the fence, out of	57 reach of the charging bull. The thundering hoofs were not far behind as	70
Red rolled after his sister.	75
The children lay on the ground, breathless and frightened. They	85 were separated from the bull by the wire fence, and they were safe at	99
last.	100
Red was still breathless and Anne was crying when their father	111 and Mr. Mill arrived. The men were short of breath, too, and both were	125 frightened.	126