While standing for long periods of time, do not lock your knees. Instead, release them just enough to relax your whole spine. If possible, put a foot on something like a footstool, low box, or a telephone book. This will elevate your knee and avoid back stress.

While seated at your desk, try not to sit with your legs straight out. Instead, bend your knees slightly to provide some solid support for your back.