

Counting Salmon

Margie, just nine years of age, had come along to help	11
her father count salmon. This was her first counting	20
adventure, and she was excited!	25
As she pulled a branch away from her face, she heard a	37
twig break underfoot. Margie shook her head and said to	47
herself, "Anyone who knows how to act in the forest should	58
make less noise than that." She decided that she must be	69
careful where she stepped and not break any more twigs.	79
When Margie caught up with her father, he whispered,	88
"If we want to see any animals before they see us, we'll have	101
to make less noise."	105
Margie nodded her head to show that she understood.	114
She had looked forward to this adventure for such a long time!	126
She just had to show Dad that she could be a good woodsman.	139
