It is quite necessary for people, old and young, alike to have fun. It is just as crucial for all to realize that having a good time is of secondary importance when there is work to do.

People who keep fun and work in proper balance are the ones who have developed a maturity that often leads to success and happiness. Those who see fun in work itself are truly fortunate people, too. For them, work is a great expectation, not a thankless affair.