Wild animals lost their dignity as wild animals when they learn to turn to people for their handouts. When there is too much food, animal populations may build up to an unnatural level, and diseases may develop. Wild animals in national parks have the opportunity to live out their lives in a natural state.