

Parents and Teachers Resources

Available Preschool Programs.

Title I

Title I funds are given to identified low income schools throughout the state. Some of those schools use portions of their funds to provide preschool services to low income students. Title I preschools may be operated in conjunction with Special Education or tuition paying students.

Special Education

Federal Funds are allocated to schools in order to serve children with special education needs. If you suspect your child has a delay or disability, contact your local school district. They will assess your child to determine if they are eligible for special education services. If your child is eligible, placement options will be discussed by the IEP team and might include district inclusive classrooms, Head Start, Title I, and classrooms for special education students only.

Home Visit

Some rural districts have teachers that visit children at home throughout the school year prior to kindergarten entrance. These teachers present lessons and leave materials and activities for parents to do between teacher visits.

High School

As part of their child care class, high school students, supervised by their teacher, provide a tuition preschool program within the high school building.

Charter School

Some charter schools have tuition preschools within their buildings. Attending the preschool does not ensure acceptance to the charter school kindergarten program.

Community

Some school districts have an entire building designated as a preschool, offering a variety of preschool programs open to the entire community. Depending on the child's needs, these services may be free of cost or tuition based.
